HOW TO BOW TO A LADY.

If you wish to make a bow in the latest fashion
And are walking, you must sharply, quickly stop;
While, starting, just as though in towering passion
From the chair or from the sofa you must "pop."

Then you place your heels upon a line together,
And you bring your toes together with a jerk,
Leaving space enough between them for a feather,
And assume the fierce expression of a Turk.

Both your hands upon the seams of trousers pinning,
With a very sudden movement forward bend
Till you show to her your head where hair is thinning,
Then you straighten, and the lady is your friend.

If by accident you should to her discover
Any portion of the grace you used to show,
You can never, never, never be her lover—
She would spurn you with her dainty little toe.

OUR WAR BALLAD.

How Francis Scott Key Wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The tragic death of Mrs. George H. Pendleton, wife of the American Minister at Berlin, and daughter of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," adds to the story of that famous national war song, and to a movement to erect a monument to its author, a fresh and vivid, if melancholy interest. The origin of the song, though partially related in a family letter of Chief Justice Taney, Mrs. Pendleton's distinguished uncle, and in a paper read several years ago before the Pennsylvania Historial Society by Colonel John L. Warner, has not heretofore been fully told. Forty years ago and more, the writer lived in the historic house from which Key was captured just before he wrote the ballad that has immortalized his name. This and other circumstances give me peculiar advantages for learning much of the author and his work. The house was the residence of Dr. William Beanes, an opulent planter at Upper Marlboro, Md., about sixteen miles from Washington. Here Madison and Taney, Hopkinson and Key, Marshall and Webster often enjoyed the princely hospitality of the doctor, finding relief from the work and worry of State affairs in this rural retreat. The immediate inspiration of the "Star-Spangled Banner" was the high-strung feelings produced all over the country by the war of 1812. Strangely enough, Key was an ardent Federalist and the war was strenuously opposed by his party from the first. That Key was more bard than politician, is conclusively shown by the remark of a contemporary that his ballad was worth 10,000 men to the Democrats—the war party. Of his quality as an artist "The Star-Spangled Banner" is all-sufficient testimony. In selecting the solemn, soul-swelling melody of "Anacreon in Heaven," and fitting to it his patriotic verse, he evinced musical taste, cultivation and judgment of the rarest sort. Not inaptly has his genius been likened to that of Mozart. At Dr. Beane's dinner-table Joseph Hopkinson, the author of "Hail Columbia," then at the height of his popularity, first met Francis Scott Key, when the latter was a rising young barrister of Georgetown; and it was at the Beanes plantation that an adventure occurred which, through a romantic chain of circumstances led up to the composition of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Mr. Key was born at Frederick, Md., Aug. 1, 1779, and died at Baltimore, Jan. 11, 1843. He was educated at St. John's College, Annapolis, practiced law at Frederick, then went to live at Georgetown and finally became District-Attorney of Washington. A good lawyer, a brilliant wit and a man of poetic genius, it is yet true that a comparatively trifling circumstance, his presence at the bombardment of Fort McHenry, afforded the single opportunity of his life to render his name famous for all time. A volume of his poems was published at Baltimore about thirty years ago, and some mention of him is to be found in McCarty's "National Songs" and in more recent publications; but his one great song overshadowed all else in his career.

In the summer of 1814 the tide of war brought Admiral Cockburn to the Republican capital, and the torch was ruthlessly applied by the British under Cockburn and Ross. When the British army reached Marlboro in the march on Washington, Cockburn, Ross and their staff officers made their headquarters at Dr. Beanes' residence. The best that the house afforded was laid before them. Pleased with his reception, General Ross placed guards around the grounds and outhouses to prevent depredations by the troops. The subsequent movements of Ross and Cockburn are written in the full blaze of history, and never were the English arms stained with fouler disgrace than by these two leaders. The so-called American army of some six thousand farmers and mechanics, hastily rallied to the capital by General Winder, with 850 regular soldiers and 700 sailors and marines under the gallant Commodore Barney, made a show of resistance when the British reached Bladensburg. But what hope was there for raw levies against veterans who had seen service under Wellington?

The capitol, President's house, public buildings, a house built by General Washington on Capitol Hill, the navy-yard, arsenal, public stores and newspaper offices were all set on fire and burned to the ground by these soldiers of George the Third. Then came the counter-panic and the adventure above alluded to. A hurricane passed over the city one afternoon and so demoralized the red-coats that they fled terror-stricken from the smouldering ruins of Washington. Gleig, in his "Narrative" tells of this absurd flight of Ross and Cockburn before the imaginary spectres of the skies. The conquerors were conquered by a gust of wind, and in their swift race back to the Patuxent, the doughty host furnished another illustration of the truism that there is but a step from the sublime to the ridiculous.

Dr. Beanes was sitting in his parlor with several neighbors on the 26th of August when a negro rushed in and exclaimed; "Massa, de red-coats are flyin'; dey done got whipped, shoa." There they were, on the outskirts of the village, in full retreat to their ships. Was it any wonder that Dr. Beanes and his neighbors became jubilant? Any wonder that they should have retired to a neighboring dell where a delightful spring bubbled up out of the cool earth, and here made a bowl of punch to celebrate the American victory which they confidently believed had been won? The flowing bowl had been filled again and again, and the doctor and his friends were becoming rather hilarious, when three British stragglers came to the spring to get a drink of water. The red-coats claimed the victory for their side and the Americans for theirs. From words they fell to blows, and the Englishmen were overpowered and carried off prisoners of war to the court-house by the doctor and his friends. But Cockburn heard of it, and that night he sent back a troop of horse to liberate his men and bring in Dr. Beanes. The poor doctor was dragged from his couch, carried off and imprisoned in the forepart of one of the ships, where he was treated with the utmost harshness. Key resolved to release his friend at all hazards. President Madison heartily seconded his efforts and ordered that the vessel used as a cartel should be placed at his service. The President directed Mr. John S. Skinner, agent for the exchange of prisoners and well known to the British to accompany Mr. Key. They came up with the enemy's fleet at the mouth of the Potomac, and were received courteously by Admiral Cochrane. But on making known the object of his mission Mr. Key was replied to by Admiral Cockburn in characteristic terms. "Instead of being released," said the marauder, "Dr. Beanes should be hung at the yardarm of this ship." Thus repulsed, Key turned to General Ross and handed him letters from English prisoners who had been wounded and left behind after the battle of Bladensburg. They spoke in grateful terms of the kind treatment of the Americans. Ross was naturally a humane man and was moved at this agreeable news. Seeing his advantage Key again made an earnest plea for the release of Dr. Beanes, and this time General Ross consented that the doctor should be returned to his friends, but added that the whole party would have to be detained pending the attack on Baltimore, then about to take place. Key and Skinner were transferred to be frigate Surprise, but Beanes was still confined on the flagship among the sailors and soldiers, who treated him with rudeness. No officer spoke to him; he was not allowed a change of clothing, and the vindictive Cockburn requited the doctor's former hospitality by ordering him to be held as a culprit rather than a prisoner of war. Again the story reaches a memorable historic scene, the attack on Baltimore, the battle of North Point and the bombardment of Fort McHenry. Ross landed and led his army to the sack of Baltimore; Cochrane moved up the Patapsco, transferred his flag to the Surprise, of lighter draught than the flagship, and when all was in readiness the bombardment of the fort began, while the roar of battle from the shore told that America and England were once more locked in the tug of war. Meantime Key, Skinner and Beanes had been transfered to their own vessel under guard of British sailors to prevent their escape during the conflict. The American vessel occupied a position from which the flag at Fort Henry was distinctly seen. Night fell and the darkness was made visible by the glare of shot and shell playing all night long on the devoted fort. It was a grand spectacle, and Key and his friends paced the deck through the night as the rockets whizzed and shells exploded. But the fort had not fallen, for the bombardment continued. Suddenly, just before dawn, the firing ceased, but nothing could be seen, and the Americans were unable to tell on which side victory had fallen. Mr. Key often afterwards spoke of that moment as the most trying of his life. He consulted his watch and counted the moments before dawn. At last a gray twilight spread over the face of the deep, and our watchers eagerly peered through their glasses to find whether the enemy's flag or their own floated over the beleaguered fort. At length the light came, and they saw that our flag was still there! When Mr. Key beheld the flag of his country above the frowning battlements his ecstacy found expression in the first and second stanzas of the "Star-Spangled Banner," and his full heart overflowed in the second chorus.

"What is that which the breeze o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream—

'Tis the Star-Spangled Banner, Oh! long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

He had not to wait long before he saw the retreating to the ships and the body of an officer of distinction solemnly borne on board. It was General Ross, who had been killed by an American sharp-shooter. Bladensburg was avenged, and the vandalism at Washington had met with a bloody reprisal at North Point. The defeated enemy set sail and Key and his friends returned to Baltimore. The poet began to write his verses on the back of a letter he found in his pocket in the fervor of the moment when he saw the American flag floating over the fort and the land forces retreating to their ships. He finished the poem while still on the vessel and while he was on his way to the shore. In order to remember some of the lines, as his paper was scant, he made notes instead of writing them out in full. On his arrival at Baltimore he immediately went to a hotel and wrote out the song as it now stands from the rough draft he had made on the boat. A friend to whom he showed the song the next morning was delighted with it. Mr. Key then gave it to a printer to strike off some copies in hand-bill form to distribute among the citizens.

THE LONDON EXHIBITION.

The Wonders of Indian Art—Artisans at Work—Ceylon and South Africa.

The London season is being prolonged this year for several reasons, and the colonial and Indian exhibition has introduced a new feature to the social whirl. There are special entertainments everywhere for the colonial and Indian people, banquets, balls, flower shows, garden parties, fetes at the Crystal Palace and at every other place. The exhibition is a vast, endless labyrinth of things strange and interesting, and one revels in Indian art products particularlarly. The same buildings at South Kensington hold it as held the fisheries, health and inventions exhibitions in preceding seasons, and each colony has tried to outdo all the others in making a great show for itself. The Indian courts are dreams of carved and inlaid screens lining the long galleries for hundreds and hundreds of feet, with Indian carpets and draperies covering the upper walls, trophies of Indian arms over every doorway, and the roof all a-flutter with flags and banners.

Within the arches of the carved screens are the glass cases containing jewelry, silks, muslins, and embroidered stuffs by the half-mile, and one tears himself away from one case to go to another filled with even more distracting things. There are embroideries in gold and colors to make one sigh with envy, and tissues of gold thread embroidered with pearls and beetles' wings until they surpass all one's imaginings of East Indian gorgeousness. Cashmere shawls and Chuddah shawls, chuddahs so fine and silky that the mythical feat of drawing them through a ring can be done in plain sight, and chuddahs of infinite shades of soft, dull blues and reds and grays, bewilder one in their various presentation. The Benares brassware, the Bombay carved woods and case after case of fretted silver hold one before them, and as for gold and silver and jeweled ornaments it would seem as if all India had emptied such treasures into the exhibition. The Dacca muslins, the famous fabrics known there as "dew of the evening" and "woven air" from their fineness and transparency, are shown, each yard worth more than a tissue of gold thread of the same width.

Better than all these things in cases is the Indian palace in one of the open courts, where the pink and white stone work of the city of Jenpore is repeated in a model palace, whose first courtyard is filled with the shops of native artisans at work, weaving carpets, embroidering shawls, cutting stone to the fineness of lace-work, molding clay on the primitive potter's wheel and beating out gold and silver ornaments. This Scindiah palace contains two rooms sacred to the use of the prince of Wales from which the public is roped out, but into which one can at least look and see the domed and softly shaded room with its beautiful walls, its divans and rugs and a central basin of overflowing water that reflects as a mirror the arches and the silk canopied ceiling.

The Ceylon division begins with a copy of the gateway and parts of the Buddhist Temple of the Sacred Tooth of Kandy, and Gantama and Buddhist emblems are prominent in all the decorations of the Ceylon gallery. There is a large case of gems in this division, over which one hangs enraptured. In it are cat's eyes as large as the end of your thumb, and ticketed at $15,000 for one such trifle, and rubies and sapphires of a size and color never seen in other exhibitions. Rubies in the rough, and sapphires of every other shade beside blue; dull astral sapphires that show a five-pointed star of white light when held at a certain angle; alexandrites that are alternately green and red, and softly shining moonstones dazzle the eye in the range of that one case of Ceylon treasures, and silver and gold and pearls, lace and tortoise-shell, make a circle of attractions around the gems.—"Ruhanah" in Globe-Democrat.

A Bath in the Morning.

In your dressing-room you have soft cold water and a sponge, probably placed there over night, so that it is in the morning of the same temperature as the air; then you have a nice, soft Turkish washing glove and a piece of plain Castile or ivory soap—not scented; that were dangerous to health; then standing before a basin of hot water the whole body is quickly lathered and rubbed thoroughly. This ought not to occupy more than say three minutes, and after this comes the cold sponge bath, which need not take more than a minute and a half. A moderately coarse towel should be used, and the skin should be thoroughly dried. Remember that the towel must not be rough enough to irritate the skin, but only to produce a pleasant glow; remember, too, that there must be no dawdling over the bath—dawdle as much as you please while dressing, but bathe with judicious celerity; and remember, thirdly, that you must never neglect to wet the head with cold water, else disagreeable sensations will be the result.

The bath is to be taken on an empty stomach, and immediately after getting out of bed. The slight shock caused by the cold water will be succeeded by feelings very delightful, indeed, feelings which I might describe if I chose, but will not, as I want you to experience them. There are sponge baths and plunge baths and shower baths, all of which may be takent at home; but for all forms of household bathing commend me to the one I have just tried to describe.—Cor. Cottage Hearth.

Watterson's Opinion of the English.

The more I see of England and the English the more I am persuaded of the irreconcilable difference between us and them, and the more odious seem to me the affectation and imitation of Anglicism by the American, who, having got a glimpse of the nobility, would straightway get himself a coat-of-arms.—Henry Watterson in Courier-Journal.

Pearls in Russia are considered as gems of bad luck and are never worn by superstitious brides.

WITHDRAWN.

J. C. HOLLOWAY, who received the nomination for State Senator at the hands of the Republican Convention of this county, has tendered his withdrawal from the ticket and it has been accepted by the County Committee, and J. A. Barham, a leading lawyer of Santa Rosa, has been selected to take his place. The withdrawal of Mr. Holloway was an imperative necessity from the fact that he was ineligible to hold the office. The State Constitution provides that a State Senator must be an inhabitant of the State three years without interruption. As Mr. Holloway had been in the State but a little over two years, and this clause in the Constitution being pointed out to him, he very sensibly tendered his withdrawal with the above result.

CANDIDATE NOTICES.

The attention of voters, both Democrats and Republicans, is called to the political cards published elsewhere in these columns. Here will be found the names of all the prominent nominees of both parties in this county, and they each and all invite the suffrages of their fellow citizens. Before voting we would advise all to read the card of each and take their choice before casting their ballots on the 2d day of next November.

REPUBLICAN SPEAKING.

By advertisement in another column it will be seen that Hon. A. J. Booth will address the people on the issues of the day at Union Hall, in this place, next Wednesday evening. The Republicans are making great preparations for the event, and as Mr. Booth is a pleasing orater and as this will be the first public speaking in Sonoma since the campaign opened a large attendance is anticipated.

THE Republican and Democratic county candidates commenced their electioneering tour last Monday. Every voting precinct will be visited and each candidate will make his bow to the people. The ball was set in motion at Duncan's Mills, the Democrats speaking at 4 in the afternoon and the Republicans at 8 o'clock the same evening. The latter speak at Ingram's and Guerneville to-day and the former at Healdsburg.

THE findings in the celebrated case of Colton against Stanford and others have been settled. The next step in the proceedings will be a formal motion for a new trial which, if denied, will be followed by an appeal to the Supreme Court.

IT is reported that ex-President Manuel Gonzales of Mexico has been assassinated. Though the rumor lacks confirmation, there may be much truth in the report as the ex-President is very unpopular with his countrymen.

THE triennial session of the National Congregational Church met at Chicago. Wednesday. There were beoween 400 and 500 delegates present.

CALIFORNIA grapes are selling in Washington at the following prices: Purple Tokay, 10 and 12 cents per pound; Muscatel from $3.50 to $4.50 per case, and Black Ferrara at the same price.

L. A. JOURDAN, postmaster at Healdsburg, has been "bounced" by the President. Henry Fox, is his successor.

LAST week 540 immigrants arrived in this State.

TOKAY grapes are bringing $30 per ton in Santa Rosa.

INCORPORATED.

This week a further impetus was given to the projected railroad between Santa Rosa and Benicia by the filing in the office of the Secretary of State at Sacramento articles of incorporation of the Santa Rosa and Benicia Central Railroad Company. The road will be a broad gauge and about fifty miles in length. The capital stock of the new road is $1,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of $10 each. The directors for the ensuing year are W. A. Orr, Jas. B. Rue, Geo. P. Noonan, T. J. Proctor, Santa Rosa, and John Walker, Sebastopol. The "Democrat" is authority for the statement that $50,000 of the capital stock has already been subscribed. Farmers along the proposed route are anxiously looking forward to the time when they will be enabled to enjoy the shipping facilities which the proposed road will give them. When the farmers of this valley have the means at hand to ship the products of their farms to San Francisco and the Eastern markets without handling the same three or four times, there will be a revival of business in our midst that Sonoma Valley has never experienced before. The large farms will be cut up into small ones and will be made to support two or three families in place of one as at present. With our present transportation facilities the small farmer has a hard struggle to get his products to market at anything like a reasonable profit, and this is one of the reasons why Sonoma Valley crops are not more diversified—why the land is devoted to the cultivation of the grape to the exclusion of many other products that can be grown with profit here if the farmer is accorded transportation facilities that will enable him to ship directly East. This being so, everybody interested in the welfare of Sonoma Valley ought to encourage by every means at their command the building of this road, provided the Donahue people do not afford us relief by commencing the construction next Spring of the long-promised road from Novato to Napa. We want the latter road, but, if that is not soon forthcoming let us give aid and encouragement to the former.

COUNTY ITEMS.

Grapes are selling for $20 per ton at Sebastopol.

The dwelling of J. Dondera, near Santa Rosa, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. Loss, $3,500.

Surveyors are at work on the proposed extension of the San Francisco & North Pacific Railroad from Cloverdale to Ukiah.

The wine cellar of H. Ludolph, situated near Forestville was burned to the ground on Thursday night of last week. Loss, $6,000; insurance, $1,000.

Geo. Baley of Cloverdale killed two California lions last week, also wounding two. These beasts have done thousands of dollars damage to the sheep raisers in that vicinity.

Mr. O'Hara objected to Mr. Allen's appointment of inspectors and judges of election in Petaluma precinct, on the ground that two of them were Prohibitionists. He therefore moved that the name of Daniel Brown be substituted for that of Robert Long.

Mr. Allen opposed the amendment with considerable acrimony.

The amendment was carried, Mr. Allen alone voting in the negative.

In the preamble of Mr. Allen's motion, appointing inspectors and judges of election, etc., the wording of the Governor's Proclamation of election was inserted verbatim; and there being a doubt in the mind of the Board as to the election of a Supervisor for the Fifth District, Mr. Coulter moved that the District Attorney's opinion be asked for.

It was so ordered, and the District Attorney was called upon.

He gave it as his opinion, based upon Section 8 of Article 5 of the Constitution of the State, that as Mr. Connolly, Supervisor of the Fifth District, was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of S. R. Houser, he holds his appointment until the election in 1888.

In view of this opinion, Mr. Coulter moved to amend so much of the foregoing preamble of Mr. Allen's motion as refers to the election of a Supervisor from the Fifth District. The motion prevailed.

On motion of Mr. Coulter, the report of Gallant Rains, Road Overseer of Petaluma road district, was received and placed on file.

In the matter of the petition of Omar Shoemake, S. G. Thompson and others, to have the obstruction on the public highway on the Guerneville and Duncan's Mills road removed, or have the same so changed that the public may have the use of the road, Mr. Connolly moved that J. W. Bagley, J. C. Jones and Len Elliason be appointed to view and lay out the proposed change of road as petitioned for, and the Chairman be instructed to approve the bond accompanying the petition.

A communication from W. H. Hilton of Glen Ellen, was received and filed, requesting the Board to take some steps toward improving the county road near that place.

One o'clock being the hour set for the opening of bids for the construction of a new County Hospital and infirmary, Mr. Allen moved, in relation to the same, that in the event of any bid not being accompanied by a certified check, in accordance with advertised notice, the Board will reserve the right to refuse the bid, though it be the lowest bid and accompanied with a bond.

The foregoing was adopted, after some discussion, and the Clerk opened and read the bids as follows: T. J. Furbee, stone foundation $9281, with mud sills on ground $8881, as per plans and specifications submitted by bidder; C. H. Bumpus, as per plans and specifications submitted by himself, $15,800, with inside and outside blinds $800 more; W. E. Canenaon, as per plans and specifications submitted by himself, $9985; John Campbell, $16,930, $15,393, $8320, $13,024, $12,850; W. Hamilton & Co., $21,500, as per plans submitted by themselves.

The Clerk then read a petition signed by thirty voters of Redwood township, praying that the polling place at Guerneville be changed from Thompson's hotel to some other place.

R. Murphy was present, and stated to the Board some of the reasons for such a change as petitioned for, among the most salient being that the inspectors and judges appointed by the Board refused to serve if it was held at that place; and, further, that the place was in or close to the bar-room and open to whoever chose to come in. Further consideration was postponed until Saturday morning.

The plans and specifications for the new County Hospital were then taken up. Dr. R. P. Smith, Jr., was present, and gave the Board his views on the matter.

After some discussion on the subject futher consideration was postponed until a full Board was present.

DELIBERATE SUICIDE.

Jacob Ahrens Blows His Brains Out With a Pistol.

The Deed Committed on the Public Street in Sight of a Number of People.

Tuesday evening last shortly after eight o'clock the sharp report of a pistol wrung out on the still night air, and those in the vicinity, looking in the direction of the shot, saw a man fall in the middle of the street, directly opposite Poppe's store. A rush was immediately made toward the prostrate man, but he was found to be past all earthly aid. The victim was discovered to be Jacob Ahrens, proprietor of the "Pioneer Saloon," and it was found that he had shot himself directly behind the right ear, the ball penetrating the brain and causing instant death. The weapon used was a small Smith & Wesson revolver, and it was found lying within a foot or so of the outstretched right hand of the dead man. A physician who examined the body, a few minutes after the shot had been fired, pronounced the man dead and he was picked up and carried to his room, and a search made to discover a motive for the deed.

CIRCUMSTACES OF THE TRAGEDY.

It appears that deceased had been drinking very hard for the past two weeks, but had been able most of the time to attend his business. He had apparently sobered up on Monday last and on the following day appeared to be in excellent spirits up to within a few hours of the firing of the shot that sent him whirling into eternity. A short time before the deed of self-destruction he closed his saloon and started out for a walk. Some time after he was seen coming down the middle of First Street East, and when opposite Poppe's store he stopped, and with his pistol in his right hand, he commenced to feel his head with the left, his evident intention being to find a fatal spot for the leaden missile. George Small, standing on the sidewalk, witnessing this action, immediately rushed upon Ahrens and sought to disarm him, but was unsuccessful. Pushing Small aside, Ahrens exclaimed: "Keep way, George, I am going to do it." Expostulating with him for a few seconds and being unable to get possession of the pistol he let go his hold on Ahrens and went for assistance. It was then that the suicide deliberately placed the weapon to his head and pulled the trigger. There was a flash and report and the suicide sprang into the air and fell backward and instantly expired in plain sight of a number of people.

MOTIVE OF THE SUICIDE.

An examination of the effects of the suicide failed to show a motive for the deed, but that it was premeditated is positively shown from the fact that on the card table in one of the rooms of the deceased's saloon was found spread out all his valuables. These consisted of two pass books, one on the Sonoma Valley Bank, showing to his credit $996, and the other on the German Bank of San Francisco, where he had on deposit $206. Along side of these was a lot of loose change, promissory notes, a bunch of keys and what he evidently intended as his last will. This was written in pencil on a sheet of note paper and was both unsigned and undated. Following is a verbatim copy of the same:

Martha Adler, - - -	5 hundred
A. F. Pauli, - - saloon,	5 hundred
R. J. Pauli, - - - - -	5 hundred

What terrible fancies took possession of and racked the unfortunate man's brain and caused him to take his own life can only be conjectered. He was a young man, being 35 years of age, and the perfect picture of health.

THE INQUEST.

On Wednesday at 10 A. M., an inquest was held on the remains by F. Breitenbach, Justice of the Peace and Acting Coroner, and the following verdict was rendered:

We, the jury find that the name of the deceased is Jacob Ahrens, that he is 35 years of age and a native of Germany, and that he came to his death on the 12th day of October, 1886, at Sonoma, Sonoma county, Cal., from a pistol shot wound in the back of his head, inflicted by his own hand with suicidal intent.

U. P. VALLEJO.
A. F. PAULI,
B. SPENCER,
WM. BOOTH,
D. CHRISTIE.

Deceased was in very good circumstances and his saloon was one the best paying in town. He was a member of the Order of Chosen Friends and as such had an insurance of $2,000 on his life. He leaves a father and sister, residing in Germany, a brother in Sullivan county, New York, and a cousin, whose home is in Guerneville, this county.

His funeral took place Thursday, and all that is mortal of poor Jake now lies within the narrow confines of his last resting place in the cemetery on the hill.

Horse Thief Arrested.

Last July fourteen head of horses were stolen from Wm. Bihler's ranch, near Donahue Landing, but were not missed owing to the large number of horses kept on his range by the owner. The thieves ran the horses over into Wogden Valley, Napa county, where they rented pasturage and turned the animals loose. The owner of the pasture, suspecting that the horses belonged to Bihler, about a month ago notified that gentleman of his suspicions and a letter was also sent to Marshal Blume of Petaluma, informing him of the circumstances. Mr. Bihler's foreman visited the pasture and at once recognized the horses as belonging to his employer. The Marshal then set about the task of ferreting out the thieves, the result of which was the arrest of Martin Joyce at the Suscol House, Napa county, last Tuesday, and he is now in jail at Petaluma. Officers are on the track of two other young men well known in this valley, and they will in all probability be arrested in a day or two.

Found Dead in Bed.

Moses E. Clark, for many years a resident of Sonoma, was found dead in his bed, on Wednesday morning last, by Deputy Sheriff Sparks. It appears that he was greatly agitated over the suicide of Jacob Ahrens and expressed a fear of retiring. However, at about 11 o'clock, following the advice of friends, he went to his room which was in the same building occupied by Ahrens during his life time, and retired. The next morning Mr. Clark's landlady, becoming alarmed at his non-appearance at the breakfast table, he being an early riser, summoned Officer Sparks who forcing the door leading to his sleeping apartment, found him dead as narrated above. It is supposed that his death was superinduced by the excitement caused by Tuesday night's tragedy. An inquest was held on the remains and the Coroner's jury found that he died from natural causes. The deceased was a native of Massachusetts, aged 57 years, unmarried and was a brother of George W. Clark of this place, from whose residence his funeral took place on Thursday.

The Late Mrs. Wratten.

Mrs. Eliza Wratten, who died near Sonoma, on the 7th inst, settled in this valley twenty-four years ago, and had resided here ever since with the exception of four or five years spent in Sacramento. She was greatly beloved by all who knew her and left a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. The deceased lady had reached the ripe old age of 82 years and was the mother of G. L. Wratten, an attorney for Gen. Vallejo at this place in the early fifties, and now a resident of New Mexico; Jas. E. Wratten of Virginia City, Mrs. A. W. Kelsey of Sacramento and Mrs. Stone of New York. The deceased's husband, who had been blind for twenty years or more, and who had been tenderly cared for by his wife through all the years of his terrible misfortune, died some four years ago, and now he has been joined in the land of the silent majority by his devoted and affectionate wife.

Everything Goes Wrong

In the body mechanism when the liver gets out of order. Constipation, dyspepsia, contamination of the blood, imperfect assimilation, are certain to ensue. But it is easy to prevent these consequences, and remove their cause, by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the bilitary organ and regulates its actien. The direct result is a disappearance of the pains beneath the ribs and through the shoulder blade, the nausea, headaches, yellowness of the skin, furred look of the tongue, and sour odor of the breath, which characterize liver complaint. Sound digestion and a regular habit of body are blessings also secured by the use of this celebrated restorative of health, which imparts a degree of vigor to the body which is its best guarantee of safety from malarial epidemics. Nerve weakness and over-tension are relieved by it, and it improves both appetite and sleep.

DEATH VALLEY.

Story of One Who Crossed the Trackless Waste.

[Los Angeles Express.]

Rev. J. W. Brier, an itinerant evangelist, and the first Protestant minister to hold forth in Los Angeles, is a guest, after an absence of thirty-six years, at the residence of George Morgan, of this city. In conversation with Mr. Brier this morning an "Express" reporter was considerably astonished to learn that he was the leader of the famous lost party of emigrants who, endeavoring to reach the Golden Gate in 1849, narrowly escaped annihilation from exposure and want in that desolate region yeleped Death Valley. Requested to detail the facts of his journey across the plains and experiences in the desert regions, landing in the southern portion of the State, the gentleman began: It was in October, 1849, that about five hundred emigrants from Missouri, Iowa and Illinois pulled out from Salt Lake City, en route to Santa Fe, where they proposed traveling west into California. The party was accounted the most thoroughly equipped of any that had till then left Salt Lake for the Golden Gate, and buoyant with hope and our future prospects, we bid good-by to the big lake, and struck boldly out to the southward. We had an experienced frontiersman for a guide, and had we but followed his advice in the matter of route, our horrible story of suffering and starvation need never have been told. Things waxed prosperous with the party until we had reached a point, I presume about 200 miles south of Salt Lake, when we encountered

A PARTY OF MORMONS

Bound also to the west. We camped together and found that the leader of the Mormons, a man named Hunt, was possessed of a pass or right of way document over the hunting grounds of the Utah Indians, and that his party proposed taking a cut-off straight through the Indian country, thus shortening the distance nearly 800 miles. Anxious to reach my destination I speedily became an exorter in the effort to induce my party to join the Mormons. A meeting was held, and, as a result, over half of the party concluded to go with them, and the next evening we separated; our friends who had decided to continue on south bidding us good-by, and speedily disappearing from view among the hills. Under the guidance of the Mormon leader we took up the new route, found it prolific in the requisites necessary for a wagon trail, and had a prosperous journey until the border of the southern part of the State was reached. Here a discussion arose as to what route to pursue toward the mines. Many of the company were of the opinion that the Walker pass route was the most practicable, while I held that a journey toward the south and west would bring us sooner over the deserts to the fertile valley beyond. In this opinion many of the company concurred, and another split was the result. My party at once began the work of

CROSSING THE TRACKLESS WASTE,

And on Christmas day, 1849, we encamped at the hot springs in Death Valley. Our route from this point lay to the south and west, and, after resting our animals and overhauling our wagons, we took that direction. The intense heat, lack of water and proper nourishment soon told on our stock and they began to die by the dozens. Coupled with this misfortune was the overwhelming one that our wagons were by reason of the heat and burning sand speedily becoming useless, and not a day passed but what some unfortunate party had to abandon their worn-out horses and broken-down vehicle and begin the task of crossing the terrible country on foot. We had not gone far when further dissensions regarding our route broke out and as a result nine of our party left us and struck out on foot in an opposite direction. We never saw them again and but two out of the party succeeded, after untold suffering, in reaching the settlements of the north. Several days after the separation we crossed their path, and knew by its uncertain course that our friends were lost. That we were right was years afterwards proven by a party of prospectors who discovered the bleaching skeletons of seven men who had in an agony superinduced by

THIRST AND STARVATION,

Crawled into a dry water-hole to die. To recount the untold miseries, sufferings from starvation, thirst and exposure, endured by our party during the march through the desert would fill volumes. The very next day after separating from our friends, the last wagon we had fell to pieces, and we were left no other recourse than to pursue our way on foot, hoping against hope for a deliverance from a horrible death that was every moment staring us in the face. Swarms of vultures flocked about us, as if by instinct made aware of the fate that in nine cases out of ten awaits the traveler lost in the sands. My wife, the only little woman in the party, proved the salvation to us all. I had given entirely out and had to be lifted from my bed on the sand every morning. Another member of the party, by his sufferings, had lost his mind, and the three or four little children crying piteously with horribly blistered feet and bodies, had to be carried in the arms of the men. Utterly unable at last to pack them, the work fell to my wife, and alternately one after the other, the little sufferers were carried in her arms across the desert. We at last reached a point to the northward of where Mojave now stands, and I decided that by traveling south we would reach the Tulare valley and find settlement. This direction we took, and in two days reached a rancho which I found was the well-known San Francisquito place. We were within a few miles of Los Angeles, and no tongue can describe our feelings as we once more saw the faces of our fellow beings and found ourselves safe in a land of plenty. A Dr. Irving, then a prominent resident of Los Angeles, was engaged in surveying a road near the rancho, and he very generously furnished us with teams and drivers and brought us to Los Angeles. My son, who in his fourth year traveled over these

TRACKLESS WASTES,

Died but two years ago in Sacramento. My wife still lives, as does an older son and I find myself, thirty-six years after my terrible experiences, within two hundred miles of them, recounting them in a city where I was the first Protestant to preach the gospel. Mr. Brier's acquaintance with the topography of Death Valley led the reporter to inquire of the location of the numerous mines, on whose fabulous wealth prospectors have for years dilated. "I know the location very nearly, of both the Gunsight lode and Breyfogle discoveries," said Mr. Brier. "The Gunsight mines, which for years have been the goal of many an adventurous gold hunter and has cost many a hardy miner his life, in a vain search for its location, is situated just south of Panamint valley, in a spur of the low mountains or hills, which are the border line of Death Valley on the north. Its mineral deposit is simply lead and antimony, and its reported wealth is mythical. The Breyfogle is undoubtedly a deposit rich in mineral wealth. The mine was first discovered by the prospector from whom it takes its name, Though he has several times since endeavored to rediscover his find, he has been unsuccessful. He was once, he claimed, within a few miles of the mine, but his provisions and water giving out, he was forced to beat a hasty retreat to the settlements. Breyfogle's mine was visited by some of our boys. It is sitated on the north side of Funeral mountain, and about 100 miles south and east of the Gunsight. To an observation of the reporter regarding a possible rediscovery of the mine, Mr. Brier said: "Of course, it is among the possibilities, but if a miner will only think and take into consideration the privation and misery attending a trip into that country, it will deter him from going, even if there be a prospect of untold wealth in store for him at the end of his journey.

What We Are Indebted to the South For.

There appears in our columns to-day the advertisement of the well-known (and universally used in the Southern States) Simmons Liver Regulator. Years ago it won its way into every household of the South by pure, sterling merit. It there takes the place of a doctor and costly prescriptions. The medicine is becoming widely known in the North, and wherever used the demand for it has steadily increased. It is a family medicine, containing no dangerous and deleterious qualities, but pure vegetable, and so gentle in its action that it can be safely given to any person, no matter what age—the cenetarian or the crowing youngster. Working people are often in that miserable state of health, which really renders them unfit for labor; but they havn't time to take medicine and be sick. Simmons Liver Regulator can be taken without causing any loss of time, and the system will be built up and invigorated by it. The Regulator promotes digestion, dissipates nasty sick headache, and gives a strong, full tone to the system. In malarious climates it is invaluable, both protecting attack from the disease and expelling the poison after it has entered the system. It has no equal as a preparatory medicine, and can be safely used when a doctor cannot be called in. Persons of the very highest character and eminence have given Simmons Liver Regulator their cordial and hearty indorsement.

AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without team.

JOHN C. EVANS, STOCKLAND, Mo., writes: "I stand up and affirm that a Washer saves more hard labor and money in a large family than any Reaper and Mower that ever was put on any farm with less than 100 acres in cultivation. If you will get up any instrument that will take as much labor off of farm as this Washer takes off the women, and save as much money as it does and cost no more, I could sell one at every house. If they had to take the fodders from under their wife and ladies to pay for it."

JOHN R. DODGE, JR., Jeweler, NORMAL, Ill., writes: "You ask what I think of the Washer I bought last summer. Ist. It is the best machine ever invented by man. 2d. We have just as good dinners on Monday as on any other day. 3d. If you run short, you can not buy ours for gold."

I will ship a sample to those desiring an agency on a week's trial on liberal terms. A thousand per cent the best washer in the world for saving labor, clothes and soap. Says capable agents big money. Write for particulars.
